

The People are Not Happy

The overriding question that any good government or political system needs to ask is: "Are the people of the nation actually happy?" Quality of life must be the foremost issue of concern. Everything else in matters of governance is secondary to this all-important quality of life directive. The rampant materialism of modernity has led to a dysfunctional situation in which billions are now experiencing deep suffering, psychological trauma, high levels of stress and anxiety, depression, and spiritual melancholy. The people are not happy. Our governments have failed us. The time has now come to establish a government that truly represents the people's interests. It is time for us to be happy once again.

Dharma Nation Movement
The Third Alternative

Find Out More
www.dharmanation.org

The People are Not Happy

The overriding question that any good government or political system needs to ask is: "Are the people of the nation actually happy?" Quality of life must be the foremost issue of concern. Everything else in matters of governance is secondary to this all-important quality of life directive. The rampant materialism of modernity has led to a dysfunctional situation in which billions are now experiencing deep suffering, psychological trauma, high levels of stress and anxiety, depression, and spiritual melancholy. The people are not happy. Our governments have failed us. The time has now come to establish a government that truly represents the people's interests. It is time for us to be happy once again.

Dharma Nation Movement
The Third Alternative

Find Out More
www.dharmanation.org